Vice-Director of Steamship Line Says It Must Have Pier Extensions.

QUICK ACTION IS NEEDED

Foot Imperator, Ready Next Spring, Couldn't Dock Here Now.

At a meeting of the Harbor Line Board vesterday in the Custom House to consider the report of the New Jersey harbor commission recommending the modification of the pierhead line from Castle Point, Hoboken, to the Pavonia ferries, Jersey City, running from fifty feet extensions at Castle Point to 130 feet at the Lackawanna ferries, J. P. Meyer, vicedirector of the Hamburg-American Line, said in answer to a question that the Ham-burg-American Line could operate profit-ably elsewhere than in New York if necessary and that if the modification shouldn't be granted the line will be obliged to consider what it can do about the matter.

obliged to consider what it can do about the matter.

He said there wasn't a place in New York large enough to dock the Imperator, the new 900 foot liner, and that plans are already under consideration for a new liner greater even than the Imperator, which is due here next April.

The hearing was before Col. William T. Rossell, Col. William M. Black and Col. S. W. Roessler of the Engineering Corps, U. S. A., and representatives of the Hamburg-American Line, the Holland-America Line and the North German Lloyd Line testified to the need for extensi on of the Hoboken piers to accommodate larger steamships.
